HOMEOWNER GRANT PROGRAM EXPANDS: NOW AVAILABLE IN 12 DISTRICTS

After a successful pilot program in the Anacostia Historic District, the Historic Homeowner Grant Program has been expanded to 12 historic districts. Low- and moderate-income homeowners are eligible for grants of up to $25,000 ($35,000 in Anacostia) to restore the exterior of their homes or make major structural repairs. To date, 69 grants have been awarded for over $1.2 million of rehabilitation work.

Mayor Adrian Fenty announced the first award of grants at an Anacostia press conference in 2008. Since then a flurry of restoration activity has enlivened that historic district. For one house on Valley Place SE, the grant came just in time. Grant funds were used to peel fake stone siding off a 1909 four-square style house. Removal of the "Formstone" exposed a rampant termite infestation and water leak that were slowly but surely destroying the house from underneath. Today, the house stands good-as-new with its wood siding restored and its termites evicted.

The grant application has two parts: Part 1 establishes eligibility and lets HPO identify the

COMMUNITY OUTREACH UPDATE

by Patsy Fletcher

Did you know that sixteen African American architects designed at least 105 homes in a DC community named Eastland Gardens between 1928 and 1955? Actually do you even know where Eastland Gardens is located? Had you attended the eighth DC Community Heritage Symposium held January 8, 2009, you would have learned this bit of amazing neighborhood history.

Community Outreach Coordinator

The DC Community Heritage Project is a program sponsored by the DC Historic Preservation Office and the Humanities Council of Washington, DC to provide support for community historians and preservationists. Over the four years since its launch, a couple hundred DC residents concerned about the heritage of their communities have participated in skills-building seminars and networking opportunities, including face time with builders, developers, and planners, all to foster local history and preservation “from the ground up,” so to speak.

In addition, for the past two years, the Community Heritage Project has provided small grants to community groups wanting to protect and promote their unique heritage. As a result, almost thirty projects representing each of DC’s eight wards have yielded wonderful results that are helping to preserve the city’s heritage. One of these is the Eastland Gardens Flower Club project, where members came together to research the homes in their neighborhood, document what before was simply unverified oral history, and produce a brochure explaining the proud architectural history of their community.

Another project was a colorful directory of Latino cultural organizations in DC with a brief history of some of the traditions and art forms of the local Latino community. Stuart Hobson Elementary School completed a youth-focused resource library on Capitol Hill history and the Tenleytown Historical Society developed a National Register nomination for a small collection of historic houses in Armsleigh Park. As you can see, there has been a wide range of heritage preservation projects emanating from “non-professional” preservationists and historians. Many of the products from these projects will be available on the HPO website.

Your community may have a project related to an aspect of its heritage or preservation that needs a small cash infusion to become a reality. The Community Heritage Project is calling for applications for up to $2000 in funding. Proposals are due by 5:00 p.m. on May 1, 2009 at the Humanities Council. You can visit <http://www.wdchumanities.org> to access an application or call me at 202-741-0816 or Albert Shaheen at the Humanities Council at 202-387-8391. There will also be orientation sessions on April 14 and 21 to learn how to complete the application.

By the way, Eastland Gardens is in far northeast DC between Kenilworth, the Aquatic Gardens, and Mayfair Mansions off I-295, in case you didn’t know! ❖ most urgent restoration needs while Part 2 determines the scope of the project and its estimated cost. All Part 2 applications are reviewed by a committee of preservation experts, which then advises the HPO on which grants should be awarded.

To apply for the grant, homeowners can download an application from the HPO website www.planning.dc.gov/hpo, or call the office at (202) 442-8818 to have one mailed.

Applications are accepted on a rolling basis; upcoming deadlines for 2009 are August 3 and December 1. Eligible historic districts include Anacostia, Blagden Alley/Naylor Court, Capitol Hill, Greater Fourteenth Street, Greater U Street, LeDroit Park, Mount Pleasant, Mount Vernon Square, Mount Vernon Triangle, Shaw, Strivers’ Section, and Takoma Park.

HISTORIC PRESERVATION DESIGN SYMPOSIUM HELD

Over 80 District residents and preservation professionals participated in the Contemporary & Compatible Symposium on March 15 at the Historical Society of Washington, D.C.’s Carnegie Library building.

The discussion centered on contextual modern design in historic neighborhoods and featured principal speakers Amy Weinstein, FAIA, former HPRB member and principal of Weinstein Studio at Esocoff & Associates; Robert Sponseller, AIA, principal at Shalom Baranes Associates; and G. Martin Moeller, Jr., senior vice president and curator at the National Building Museum.

The event was sponsored by the Dupont Circle Conservancy, Historic Districts Coalition, the Historical Society of Washington, DC, the Capitol Hill Restoration Society, the National Trust for Historic Preservation, and the DC Historic Preservation Office. ❖

HPO LAUNCHES WEBSITE REVISIONS

During the coming months, the Historic Preservation Office will undertake an aggressive update and expansion of the office's website to better serve the citizens of the District of Columbia.

When the project is complete, visitors will be able to access the HPO through a direct portal or through the standard Office of Planning website. The site will also feature special sections tailored to homeowners, Advisory Neighborhood Commissions, District agencies, and developers. ❖

HISTORIC PERMITS DATABASE TRAINING SESSIONS WELL RECEIVED

On April 7th, for a second consecutive year, the Historic Preservation Office sponsored hands-on training for the D.C. Historic Permits Database at the Martin Luther King, Jr. Memorial Public Library.

Each of the two training sessions drew a full house with over 70 participants convening at the library's computer lab. Brian Kraft, the database designer, walked participants through the system, demonstrating how to retrieve nearly 75 years of construction permit data for buildings in the District.

Information from over 60,000 permits detailing 132,000 buildings was keyed into the database over a period of several years by Kraft, a contract historian with the HPO. Funding for the project was granted through the annual fund HPO receives from the National Park Service. The resulting product has been highly praised and was recently featured in "John Kelly's Washington" column in the Washington Post.

Participants represented a wide range of interests from individual homeowners, historians, community preservationists, realtors, and developers.

The database is available to the public at the Washingtoniana Room on the 3rd floor of the MLK Library (202-727-1213) and at the Historical Society of Washington Kiplinger Library (202-383-1850). Please contact each institution for their hours of operation. ❖

PROCEDURES FOR HISTORIC DESIGNATION PENDING

The Historic Preservation Office is in the process of drafting revisions to the existing rules in Chapter 2 of the Historic Preservation Regulations (DCMR Title 10A) for consideration by the Historic Preservation Review Board. The proposed revisions refine and amplify the rules for public comment and other matters in the historic landmark and historic district designation process.

Recommended by the Board at the January 22, 2009 meeting, the proposed rules are currently under review by the Office of Attorney General. The draft regulations are also posted continued on page 4

HPRB APPROVES DC'S FIRST GAY RIGHTS LANDMARK

On February 26th, the District of Columbia Historic Preservation Review Board voted unanimously to approve the designation of the Franklin Kameny Residence at 5020

Cathedral Avenue, NW to the District of Columbia Inventory of Historic Sites.

Kameny's home, regarded as the epicenter of the city's gay rights movement, was nominated by the Rainbow History Project and the DC Preservation League. HPRB's decision was based on Criterion A for history and Criterion B for significant individuals that are applicable to both the local designation law and the National Register of Historic Places. ❖
